• About 100,000 pages of historic Missouri newspapers, such as the St. Joseph Observer and the University Missourian, from 1880 to 1922 are being digitized by the State Historical Society of Missouri, Columbia, with support from a grant of more than $595,000. This work is part of Chronicling America, an NEH collaboration with the Library of Congress.

• Perhaps the most genuinely American musical genre, jazz offers rich material to teachers of core humanities subjects such as English, history, art history, and film. Teaching Jazz as American Culture, a summer institute and a subsequent workshop at Washington University, St. Louis, was supported by a $74,000 grant to assist teachers in understanding the impact of jazz both domestically and abroad.

• The Missouri Historical Society, St. Louis, was awarded a $400,000 implementation grant for a 6,000-square-foot exhibition, The American Revolution on the Frontier. The exhibition is scheduled to open in 2014 before moving to Pittsburgh, Ottawa, and Philadelphia.

• The University of Missouri, Kansas City, has received three grants totaling $490,000 for six sessions of the teacher workshop, Contested Visions of Freedom and the Missouri–Kansas Border Wars.

• Drury University, Springfield, was awarded a grant of $160,000 to organize teacher workshops on the topic Wilson’s Creek: Understanding the Civil War’s Second Major Battle, presented on the significant, if overlooked, site where the fighting occurred.

• Washington University was awarded nearly $120,000 in 2010 for development of Varieties of American Feminism, 1830s to 1930s, a schoolteacher seminar that examined the works of American women writers such as Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony, Sojourner Truth, and Anna Julia Cooper.

• The Cave Archaeology Investigation and Research Network received a grant of $1,950 from the Missouri Humanities Council to document prehistoric footprints, rock art, and bear tracks in a cave north of Springfield.

• Published by the Missouri Humanities Council, Southeast State Missouri University Press, and the Warriors Arts Alliance, Proud to Be: Writing by American Warriors features fiction and nonfiction writing by returning veterans.

• Missouri was the quintessential border state in the Civil War, with dueling governments and soldiers fighting for the Union and Confederate armies. The Friends of the Missouri State Archives received a grant of $1,700 from the Missouri Humanities Council to add to a State Archives Civil War exhibit of historic documents telling the story of Missouri’s divided loyalties.

• The Missouri Humanities Council awarded $2,000 to the Cape Girardeau Convention and Visitors Bureau for fostering the art of storytelling. “Cape Girardeau Ghost Stories: Where the River Turns a Thousand Chilling Tales” was the third annual event, which is geared especially for students.
NATIONWIDE

NEH supports programs and projects that contribute directly and dramatically to the cultural life and historical perspective of tens of millions of Americans.

Here are some examples.

PRESERVING THE FIRST DRAFT OF HISTORY
Nothing captures the character of a community or the spirit of an era better than its newspapers. Chronicling America, a partnership between NEH and the Library of Congress, is digitizing millions of pages taken from newspapers dating back to the early Republic, making it possible to search the pages online for any word or phrase—at no charge.

AMERICAN VOICES
The papers of prominent Americans are a vital part of our cultural heritage, and NEH funds many projects to assemble and preserve them, including complete sets of collected papers for ten presidents from Washington to Lincoln to Eisenhower as well as public figures such as Thomas Edison, Martin Luther King Jr., George Marshall, Emily Dickinson, Walt Whitman, and Mark Twain.

SUCCEEDING BY THE BOOK
Over the past forty-five years, scholars supported by Endowment grants have produced more than 7,000 books—including numerous classics such as Dumas Malone’s Jefferson and His Time, James McPherson’s Battle Cry of Freedom, and Louis Menand’s The Metaphysical Club: A Story of Ideas in America—that have garnered scores of awards, including eighteen Pulitzer Prizes.

PAST AND PRESENT IN PIXELS
NEH investments in the digital humanities make it possible for a student to walk the corridors of the Temple of Karnak in ancient Egypt in virtual 3-D, or to visit the 1964–65 World’s Fair held in New York. Spectral imaging has been used to create an online critical edition of explorer David Livingstone’s previously unreadable field diary.

GENERATING PRIVATE SUPPORT
Almost $2 billion in humanities support has been generated by the Challenge Grants program, which requires recipients to raise $3 or $4 in outside funds for every federal dollar they receive.

HISTORY ON SCREEN AND IN TOWN
NEH-supported films bring history alive. Twenty million Americans watched Ken Burns’s The War (2007), and ten million saw The Abolitionists (2013). NEH also funds hundreds of exhibitions—not only blockbusters such as “King Tut” that make the heritage of other cultures accessible to the American public, but also smaller projects such as Lincoln, the Constitution, and the Civil War that reach classrooms across the country.

KEEPING TEACHERS UP-TO-DATE
Seminars, institutes, and workshops give teachers the opportunity to refresh and deepen their knowledge about the humanities through intense study. In the past three years, more than 2,100 college teachers and 7,500 schoolteachers have participated in NEH-supported programs, to the benefit of more than one million students.

REACHING ACROSS THE NATION
Last year, state humanities councils, NEH’s affiliates in the fifty states, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories put on 16,800 reading and discussion programs, 6,500 literacy programs, 4,000 speakers bureau presentations, 5,400 conferences, 1,750 Chautauqua events, 24,000 media programs, and 7,300 technology, preservation, and local history events. The 56 councils also sponsored 2,300 exhibitions.
