Below are some examples.

- The Brooklyn Navy Yard Center, situated inside the former Marine Commandant’s residence, has received a $336,500 grant to implement a long-term exhibition about the rise, decline, and revitalization of this well-known arsenal and its role in American history dating to the seventeenth century.

- The New-York Historical Society received a $75,000 planning grant to develop "Lincoln in New York," which documented and explored the sixteenth president’s fraught relationship with the country’s burgeoning capital of commerce, then a stronghold of pro-slavery sentiment. The museum then developed, with a $400,000 grant, a portable exhibition that traveled to libraries nationwide.

- Two hundred schoolteachers attended one-week scholar-led workshops devoted to "FDR and the World Crisis: 1933 to 1945" at the former Roosevelt residence in Hyde Park, using this national historic site as a lens through which to view this president’s policies and decisionmaking from the Great Depression through World War II. The Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt Institute received two separate grants totaling more than $300,000 in support.

- The Greene County Historical Society in Catskill received a $320,000 grant to establish a permanent exhibition at the Thomas Cole National Historic Site, the former home and studio of the founder of the Hudson School of painting, which includes a film, exhibition panels, docent tours, a website, and educational programming.

- In the early years of the Revolutionary War, Fort Ticonderoga was called the “key to the continent.” With a $160,000 grant, the fort is hosting eighty schoolteachers for one-week workshops devoted to the American Revolution on the Northern Frontier.

- The Papers of Gouverneur Morris: Diaries Project, supported with two grants totaling $490,000, is the first modern effort to transcribe, annotate, and publish the personal papers of this Founding Father, contributor to the U.S. Constitution, minister to France, U.S. senator, and close friend of Alexander Hamilton.

- The documentary The War of 1812 became the first significant television treatment of the first war declared by the United States of America. The film was produced with the assistance of an $800,000 production grant to the Western New York Public Broadcasting Association.

- 2009 marked a double anniversary: the bicentennial of Robert Fulton’s steamboat voyage on the Hudson and the quadricentennial of the explorations of Henry Hudson and Samuel de Champlain. A $253,000 grant funded speakers, conferences, and events marking the 400th anniversary of New York State.

- Over five years two grants totaling $477,000 to the New York Council for the Humanities supported Together—Book Talk for Kids and Parents, a program for children ages 9 to 11 and their guardians to read and discuss books with humanities scholars.
NATIONWIDE

NEH supports programs and projects that contribute directly and dramatically to the cultural life and historical perspective of tens of millions of Americans.

Here are some examples.

PRESERVING THE FIRST DRAFT OF HISTORY
Nothing captures the character of a community or the spirit of an era better than its newspapers. Chronicling America, a partnership between NEH and the Library of Congress, is digitizing millions of pages taken from newspapers dating back to the early Republic, making it possible to search the pages online for any word or phrase—at no charge.

AMERICAN VOICES
The papers of prominent Americans are a vital part of our cultural heritage, and NEH funds many projects to assemble and preserve them, including complete sets of collected papers for ten presidents from Washington to Lincoln to Eisenhower as well as public figures such as Thomas Edison, Martin Luther King Jr., George Marshall, Emily Dickinson, Walt Whitman, and Mark Twain.

SUCCEEDING BY THE BOOK
Over the past forty-five years, scholars supported by Endowment grants have produced more than 7,000 books—including numerous classics such as Dumas Malone’s Jefferson and His Time, James McPherson’s Battle Cry of Freedom, and Louis Menand’s The Metaphysical Club: A Story of Ideas in America—that have garnered scores of awards, including eighteen Pulitzer Prizes.

PAST AND PRESENT IN PIXELS
NEH investments in the digital humanities make it possible for a student to walk the corridors of the Temple of Karnak in ancient Egypt in virtual 3-D, or to visit the 1964–65 World’s Fair held in New York. Spectral imaging has been used to create an online critical edition of explorer David Livingstone’s previously unreadable field diary.

GENERATING PRIVATE SUPPORT
Almost $2 billion in humanities support has been generated by the Challenge Grants program, which requires recipients to raise $3 or $4 in outside funds for every federal dollar they receive.

HISTORY ON SCREEN AND IN TOWN
NEH-supported films bring history alive. Twenty million Americans watched Ken Burns’s The War (2007), and ten million saw The Abolitionists (2013). NEH also funds hundreds of exhibitions—not only blockbusters such as “King Tut” that make the heritage of other cultures accessible to the American public, but also smaller projects such as Lincoln, the Constitution, and the Civil War that reach classrooms across the country.

KEEPING TEACHERS UP-TO-DATE
Seminars, institutes, and workshops give teachers the opportunity to refresh and deepen their knowledge about the humanities through intense study. In the past three years, more than 2,100 college teachers and 7,500 schoolteachers have participated in NEH-supported programs, to the benefit of more than one million students.

REACHING ACROSS THE NATION
Last year, state humanities councils, NEH’s affiliates in the fifty states, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories put on 16,800 reading and discussion programs, 6,500 literacy programs, 4,000 speakers bureau presentations, 5,400 conferences, 1,750 Chautauqua events, 24,000 media programs, and 7,300 technology, preservation, and local history events. The 56 councils also sponsored 2,300 exhibitions.
