

Responsibilities of Institutions Administering Fellowship Programs Supported by NEH

The following conditions govern National Endowment for the Humanities fellowships awarded by independent research institutions through the FPIRI program. Program staff is available to assist with questions about the responsibilities outlined below. Contact Geoff Burrows, Senior Program Officer, gburrows@neh.gov, 202-606-8479; or Jennifer Untalan, Program Analyst, juntalan@neh.gov, 202-606-8389.

Application and eligibility requirements for NEH fellowships

Fellowships, supported entirely or in part by NEH funds, are for individuals who have completed their formal professional training. Consequently, degree candidates and individuals seeking support for work in pursuit of a degree are not eligible to hold NEH-supported fellowships. Advanced degree candidates must have completed all requirements—except for the actual conferral of the degree—by the application deadline for the fellowship.

Foreign nationals are not eligible to apply unless they have lived in the United States for the three years immediately preceding the application deadline for the fellowship.

Institutions must give all eligible applicants equal consideration; they may not restrict eligibility to members of a scholarly organization or to persons affiliated with institutional members of a scholarly organization.

Institutions may not accept applications from any of their own officers, employees, members of the board of trustees or advisers, or selection committee members, until at least one year has elapsed since the person's last service in such a position. The same restriction applies to officers, employees, and board members of parent organizations.

Institutions may not require an administrative or application fee of applicants for NEH fellowships.

Publicity

Institutions are asked to publicize the availability of NEH fellowships and their application procedures clearly and effectively, so that all potential applicants can learn of the full range of opportunities. Publicity materials should contain an explicit reference to the National Endowment for the Humanities fellowships and the NEH funding offered through the institution. (The NEH logo can be downloaded here.)

The fellowship announcement must state the amount of the NEH stipend contribution ($5,000 per month of tenure). If costs for housing and regular meals will be automatically deducted from the stipend, you must disclose that fact in the announcement, application materials, and award letters to prospective fellows.

Selection of NEH fellows

Each institution must ensure the fair and informed selection of recipients of NEH fellowships. NEH-supported fellows must be chosen by an external committee composed of qualified scholars drawn from outside the institution's staff and governing bodies. The committee must convene, either virtually or in person, and all members should be replaced each year. NEH requires a selection committee with at least three members.

Recipient institutions must avoid real or perceived conflicts of interest in the deliberations of the selection committee. Institutions must have a clearly stated policy regarding conflicts of interest; NEH's policy (PDF) can serve as a guide. Staff, officers, board members, and trustees of the institution may not serve as voting members on selection committees and may not pre-screen or review applications for NEH awards, except for completeness and basic eligibility. They may not advocate for or against a particular proposal during the committee's deliberations. The same restrictions apply to staff, officers, and trustees of parent organizations. Persons holding individual memberships at an institution should not constitute a majority on that institution's selection committee.

NEH funds may be awarded only to applicants recommended by the external committee.

Tenure of NEH fellowships

Fellowship tenure must be continuous and last from four to twelve months. Residential NEH fellows are expected to be in residence during their entire tenure period and to work on their projects on a full-time basis; likewise, nonresidential NEH fellows are expected to work on their projects on a full-time basis. If a fellow is obliged through special circumstances to depart before the end of the tenure period, he/she shall receive a pro rata stipend payment (see "Stipends," below).

An individual long-term fellowship may be split between two FPIRI-funded institutions. Cooperating institutions should discuss and agree upon the tenure and stipend to be awarded by each institution to ensure that the maximum fellowship stipend and tenure are not exceeded (see "Stipends," below). Institutions should ask individuals to whom they are offering awards if they have applied for or are already receiving other NEH funding.

NEH must approve any change in fellowship tenure.

Stipends

NEH stipends for fellows are $5,000 per month, for a minimum of four and a maximum of twelve months. A recipient institution must inform applicants and awardees of the stipend rate and disclose, when applicable, what amounts it is adding to the NEH-funded stipend or by what amount the stipend is being reduced to defray the costs of lodging and regular meals at the center. Stipend deductions for other fees or indirect costs are not allowed. Stipend deductions for fringe benefits such as healthcare can be offered to fellows on a voluntary basis.

If a fellow is obliged through unanticipated circumstances to depart before the end of his/her tenure period, the institution must prorate the NEH fellow's stipend or—if the fellow has already received the full stipend—ensure that the appropriate pro rata share of the stipend is returned.

An institution can supplement stipends from its own funds, and fellows can receive additional funds from other sources. Although NEH fellows may hold non-NEH fellowships or grants during fellowship tenure, including sabbaticals and grants from their own institutions, they may not hold another concurrent NEH grant.

Other benefits and services to NEH fellows

Recipient institutions must grant recipients of NEH funds all benefits, services, and accommodations normally accorded other fellows.

Budget changes

Recipient institutions must contact the NEH Division of Research Programs and Office of Grant Management concerning any proposed changes to an awarded budget. Unspent funds for selection costs may not be used to supplement fellowship stipends.

Annual reports

After the completion of each competition and the awarding of fellowships, the recipient institution must provide NEH's Division of Research Programs with an annual Fellowship Selection report by April 30. A detailed guide for preparing the report is contained in Instructions for Fellowship Selection Reports, a document that is updated annually. The current version is available here.

A revised version of the document will be sent to grantee institutions at least six weeks before the April 30 deadline. The instructions are also available from Geoff Burrows and Jennifer Untalan, whose contact information appears at the start of this document.

Incomplete reports will be returned for revision.

If an individual reported as an NEH fellow later declines or is unable to complete the full tenure of the fellowship, institutions must inform NEH program staff through eGMS/Reach. If an alternate candidate is subsequently awarded a fellowship, the full information about that individual (see Instructions for Fellowship Selection Reports) must be provided and an electronic data form submitted for that individual. For stipends that are supplemented with non-NEH funds, indicate the total NEH portion of the award in the data form and, if applicable, add the amount of additional funding in parentheses. The institution should inform NEH program staff through eGMS of subsequent changes in stipends or tenure as they occur. As explained in Instructions for Fellowship Selection Reports, the institution must also summarize such changes in the subsequent report.

Maintenance of files of NEH fellows

Institutions must maintain files containing the full applications of NEH-funded scholars (including résumés, project proposals, and indications of the tenure periods and stipend amounts) for a period of three years following the submission of the final Federal Financial Report to NEH. Institutions also must keep a record of the selection committee's deliberations, including application ratings and the selection committee members' written comments about the proposals. Institutions are required to provide copies of application files immediately upon the request of the Endowment.

Research misconduct policy

Each institution must have in place a research misconduct policy. Institutions administering NEH fellowships are subject to NEH's policy on research misconduct, as spelled out in Article 38 of the General Terms and Conditions for Awards. The full text of NEH's research misconduct policy is available online and can serve as a guide.

Acknowledgment of NEH support

All materials publicizing or resulting from grant activities must contain an acknowledgment of NEH support. This requirement includes materials that advertise the availability of fellowships at the institution, which should contain a statement of the estimated number of NEH fellowships available. The acknowledgment should incorporate the NEH logo, which can be downloaded here.

For example, acknowledgements should appear in

- announcements of the fellowship opportunity,
- materials that describe the procedures for the selection of fellows and other award recipients,
- announcements of the individuals selected (persons supported in whole or in part by NEH funds must be so identified, even when other sources of funding are involved), and
- reports on substantive work accomplished by NEH fellows.

Institutions are expected to ensure that all products—scholarly articles, books, videos, CD-ROMs, websites, etc.—resulting from work conducted by NEH fellows contain an acknowledgment of NEH support.

The acknowledgment in award products, including those produced by NEH fellows and reports on work accomplished by NEH fellows, must contain the following statement: “Any views, findings, conclusions, or recommendations expressed in this [publication/program/video/website] do not necessarily reflect those of the National Endowment for the Humanities.”

Certifications from participants

A recipient institution must ensure that NEH fellows are not debarred or suspended from doing business with the federal government by checking the Exclusions area within the “Search Records” functional area of SAM.gov (formerly the Excluded Parties List System or EPLS). The institution's agreement with the fellow should also include the following term or condition: “As an NEH award recipient, [name of recipient institution] is prohibited from doing business with any organization or person if they have been debarred or suspended by any federal department or agency. As subrecipients of NEH funds, fellows may not be debarred or suspended by any federal department or agency and must comply with the OMB Guidelines to Agencies on Governmentwide Debarment and Suspension disclosure requirements contained in Subpart C of 2 CFR Parts 180 and 3369. The OMB and NEH guidelines on Debarment and Suspension are available on the NEH website.” For further information, please refer to Article 29 Debarment and Suspension of the General Terms and Conditions for Awards.

Products and publications by NEH fellows

In its annual fellowship selection reports to NEH a recipient institution should list all scholarly articles, books, videos, CD-ROMs, websites, etc. appearing during the year being reported that were prepared by NEH fellows supported under the current or previous awards and any prizes won by such products. The institution should enter this information under the appropriate grant numbers in eGMS/Reach at the “Products and Coverage” tab. It should remind its NEH fellows to send one copy of all such books, articles, and monographs to the Endowment’s Division of Research Programs (attn: FPIRI).

Final reports

In addition to a final financial report, institutions must submit a final performance report to NEH. This report need not repeat information provided in the interim reports, but it should offer an overview of the institution’s fellowship program during the period of performance. Instructions for submitting final performance reports will be made available through eGMS/Reach. For further information, see <https://www.neh.gov/grants/manage/performance-reporting-requirements>.
